

Hi Guys,

I hope you had a lovely Easter and were inundated with Easter Eggs, unfortunately I wasn't! After my Christmas escapade of eating Isaac's and Freddie's advent calendars, and a very expensive visit to the vets, I am no longer offered any chocolate.

We have been out and about a lot in Towneley Park and the surrounding fields and we have found lots of things which we hadn't noticed before so I thought we would show you some of the things we have found.

This is a young deer we saw early one morning, we have never seen one so close up and wondered if it was because everywhere is so quiet. Have you seen any?

Mrs Long told me there are quite a few around where you live.

This is a picture of the oldest tree in Burnley. Apparently it was planted when Queen Elizabeth I was on the throne, about 500 years ago. It is an oak tree and you can see it from the park.

Finally, we found this strange building just behind the hall. It was an icehouse where the people who live and worked in the hall would store ice before the days when people had fridges in their homes. They would collect the ice in the winter and store it here! Today it has been recycled! It now houses bats, which are a protected species, so we won't be able to go inside it. You can find this building if you walk up the path behind the hall towards the golf club.

Well that's all for the moment. Take care of yourselves and your families and I will be in touch soon.

Love Atticus
